age of twenty-one years, do hereby es-teem it a privilege as well as a duty, in-dependent of any human coercion or prerogative whatever, to make choice of that religious persuasion which is most agreeable to my own conscience, and according to my apprehension the most consistent with divine revelation for the worship of the Supreme Being, do hereworship of the Supreme Deing, do here-by acknowledge and conscientiously be-lieve the denomination called Baptist to be the right and most evangelical method of worshiping the Father in spirit and in trath, and hereby dissent from all persuasions and denominations in relig-ion, of what kind or establishment soever they may pretend to or be of, except that of the order and establishment of the Baptists; and do, in consequence thereof, acknowledge myself as one of that Society in full belief of the rectitude of that persuasion and the purity of its practice. And do also, from a conscientious principle, deny and utterly refuse to contribute by way of compulsive taxation to the support and maintenance of any other order, persuasion, or establishment whatever; in witness whereof, I have a few to be a support as the proof of the support o beceunto set my hand this 18th day of April, 1779.

Thomas Dessmone.

Then follows, adds the correspondent, petitions like the above, from four others, which are separately recorded in the "Book of Records." Book of Records.

As late as 1806, fifteen persons made application to be released from paying their ministers' taxes to the standing order, and it was voted that they "be not released from paying them."

MUSCULAR POWER.

The strengthand dexterity of the "hamais" of Constantinople in carrying enormous burdens, says the Levant Herald, are proverbial, and it is surprising to see one of these poor Eastern porters quietly plodding his way up or down some hilly street with a perfect mountain of material pilled upon his back. The loads they carry are most miscellaneous, but even old residents, blass on this point, were astonished recently to see a hamal staggering along the Grand Rue de Pera with a large four-wheeled carriage—all complete except the horses—lashed on his porter's knot. It would be interesting to know what are the habits and diet of this powerful hamal. Is he an early ing to know what are the habits and diet of this powerful hamal. Is he an early riser? Is he a tectotaller? Does he smoke? And how did he bring himself into such condition that he can carry a carriage instead of requiring a carriage to carry him? His muscular power must far exceed not only that of Milo, but even that of the famous English athlete, Thomas Topham, of Islington, who, on the 21st of April. 1739. advertised him. the 21st of April, 1739, advertised him-self to perform several feats of strength at the Nag's Head, Gateshead, on the 23d of that month, namely: "He bends an iron poker, three inches in circumference, over his arm, and one of two inches and a quarter round his neck: he break and a quarter round his neck; he oreaks a rope that will bear two thousand weight, and with his fingers rolls up a pewter dish of seven pounds hard metal; and lays the back part of his head on one char and his back part of ir and his heels on another, and sutfering four men to stand on his body. moves them up and down at pleasure; he lifts a table six feet in length by his teeth, with half a hundred weight hang-ing at the farthest end of it; and, lastly, to oblige the public, he will lift a but to oblige the public, he will lift a butt fall of water." Topham, however, did not, like the hamal of Constantinopie, carry a four-wheeled carriage on his back, nor did his extraordinary strength conduce to the equanimity of his temper or to his peace of mind, if we may judge by his end, for in the obituary notices of last century it is stated that on August 10, 1749, "died Thomas Topham, known by the name of the Strong Man, master of a public house in Shoreditch, London. In a fit of jealousy he stabbed his wife, then cut his own throat and stabbed himself, after which he lived two days."

himself, after which he lived two days. We were hasty in announcing that the Juggernaut festival in India had failed this year. According to the Calcutta correspondent of the London Times, six or eight deaths from dragging the cars occurred at a place called Gooptipara. Yet the people, he reports, do not care "about dragging the car, which they shirk, unless tenants on the temple The priests only are interested in their gains, and the stopping of the dangerous cars, as proposed by the Ben-gal Government, would not be resented by any but them. In the heart of these cars is a famous shrine, that of Tarke-shur, or Shir, in his character of Esculapius. For two months of the year the place is thronged by orthodox Hindus from all parts, who have made vows in sickness.

Dying.—There is nothing with which we are so familiar, and yet of which we known so little, as the process of dying. The great mystery can only be fathomed in the act. We sit by the side of friend or relative in his last extremity; we watch the dark shadow as it steals over his face, shutting out all of earth; we suffer with him in a corresponding degree the agony of separation; but we can never know what is passing, at the most awful moment, in his mind. "Of what do the dying think?" says an English writer. There are moments when the anguished faces that bend over them would give much to solve that problem. They know death is creeping nearer. They hear him in the restless tick of the clock, in the sobs of the children, in the desperate anguish of the watching mother. They know that as yet a little while and the moving shadow on the pane, the twitter of the birds, the dying sunlight, and the weird sigh of the winds, will cease to be for the sick—that a few more hard drawn breaths will bring him face to face with unfathomable knowledge. They know they may never, after to-day, get one more living kiss from his lips, or gain the balm of recognition from his eyes, and as they yearn for a look or sign, his eyes look beyond them to some invisible pres-ence. His faint gestures are not ad-dressed to them; his hands wander in search of something they cannot give him. Is the face to which he beckons that of friend or foe? Are those flowers he would fain pluck from some aerial cluster of blossoms? Does he hear the weeping? Does he guess how near is the solution of earth's mystery?

congregational churches in the New England States, it was not so easy for a believer to choose the church to which he should belong. A correspondent of the Religious Herald, Richmond, Va., has exhumed the following petition to be a Baptist, made in good faith, from the records of North Conway, N. H.:

GENTLEMEN, SELECTMEN OF CONWAY; Know ye that I, Thomas Densmore, of Conway aforesaid, having on the twentieth day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, arrived to the age of twenty-one years, do hereby esteem it a privilege as well as a duty, independent of any human coercion or home, or to refine, civilize, tame and humanize a rude brother, making him gentle, affectionate and lovenble. It is a feast to even look at such a joy-inspiring girl, such a woman girl, and see the smiles flowing, so to speak, from the parted lips, displaying a set of clean, well brushed teeth, looking almost the personification of beauty and goodness, singing and as merry as the birds—the wide awake birds that commenced their morning concert long before the lazy boys dreamed that the sun was approaching and about to pour a flood of light and warmth upon the earth. Such a girl is like a gentle shower to the parched earth, bestowing kind words, sweet smiles and acts of mercy to all around her—the joy and light of the household.

TAME POUPOISES .- The Land and Water states, on the authority of the officers of an English ship-of-war, that the natives of Moreton Bay, on the east of Australia. of Moreton Bay, on the east of Australia, have domesticated the porpoise, and use it to aid them in fishing. In the course of a surveying voyage, the natives came off to the ship and entreated those on board "not to shoot their tame porpoises." They explained that a great number of these cetaceans were accustomed to bask on the surface of the water not far from the shore, and were occasionally fed and never disturbed by them until they required their services. When a shoal of fish entered the bay, and came between the "sea-hogs" and the land, the people went out to the seaward of them, and roused the latter from their siesta by striking the surface of the water with striking the surface of the water with their spears and paddles. The porpoises then chased the fish, caught and ate some and drove the rest in shore; and as soon as they came within a proper distance a net was shot around them and a splendid haul was made.
